Dear Prime Minister,

Older people in the UK are living longer – but not healthier for longer.

That is why we need to find a modern solution to the modern phenomenon of longevity. Representing a broad coalition of older people's representatives, policymakers, private sector and civil society leaders, we are calling on you to expand the supply of housing and care options in the UK.

Just as previous decades saw the expansion of the care home and home care sectors, there is now a new consensus that the 2020s need to be the decade of housing-with-care (such as extra care housing and retirement villages providing care and support) – not least because of how this sector has proved itself in successfully shielding residents from Covid-19 over the last twelve months.

Yet this option is only available to a tiny fraction of the UK's population – only 0.6% of the over-65s live in housing-with-care settings, about one tenth of the levels seen in countries such as the US, Australia and New Zealand. Increasing UK provision to only a third of these levels would result in more than a £100bn of economic activity, create 40,000 jobs, save the NHS and social care systems billions of pounds and see more than 100,000 family homes freed up.

Proposals for social care funding reform have been repeatedly pushed back, but we say that expanding social care options must start now: by creating a world-class system of housing-with-care that couples a focus on independence and prevention with a safety net of care services and consumer protection. This would sit alongside and complement existing care options such as care homes and home care, creating more choice for older people.

To achieve this, we must look beyond the remit of the Department of Health and Social Care: multiple departments and ministries will need to work together to join up planning policy, funding (for those with moderate means) and a regulatory framework in a true cross-governmental effort, for example in the form of a task force. Crucially, this would be a low-cost initiative bringing transformative effects, at a time when the Government has been spending to fight Covid-19 and boost the economy.

Announcing this commitment and setting up the mechanisms for growth would be a profoundly positive statement of the Government's intent to improve choices for our ageing population. The decade ahead can and must be a brighter one.

Yours sincerely,
